Epilogue to the Class of 1968

Three long years that now seem so short. Memories, good and bad, that will never be forgotten. The Class of 1968 has no motto expressing our one common and unifying ideal. No phrase can be found, for as individuals we harbor different feelings. Some look upon these past years as a time that lifted our troubles to a higher plane of regard. Some delighted in the environment of education as being caught up into the world of thought. While a few learned to put down the richest book to listen to the right person. Some realized that education can be a weapon whose effects depend on whoever holds it. But sadly we all realized that in these three years of gaining a small portion of life's truth, we have given in exchange our classes most valuable asset—Youth.
